Statement by the Hon. Perry Warjiyo,
Governor of the Fund for Indonesia

As the global economic activity gradually resumes, the progress of health and socio-economic recovery remains uneven. As uncertainties remain, ensuring equitable access to vaccines is a game changer to end the pandemic. Amidst multifaceted challenges faced by the world today, strengthening concerted effort in the spirit of multilateralism is critical and more important than ever, to promote an even and accelerated economic recovery. This condition signifies the need for well calibrated, well planned, and well communicated exit strategy to ensure that all countries will recover together. Authorities should also seize the opportunity to recover stronger by promoting greener, more inclusive, and digital recovery. Under the Indonesian G20 Presidency next year, “Recover Together, Recover Stronger” will be the main theme with focus on set of reinforcing pillars of action: promoting productivity, increasing resilience and stability, and ensuring sustainability and inclusive growth.
